One Photo, One Story

The Stories Behind the Photographs You Already Have every photo is holding a story.

Choosing the Photos

Somewhere in your home there is a box, a drawer, or an album of photographs that nobody has asked about in years. This book is how you answer them anyway.

Pick a photo. Tape or glue it to the marked space. Then write the story around it — who is in it, when it was, and what the camera didn't catch.

CHOOSE Photos with people in them beat photos of scenery. Blurry is fine. The photo you almost skip is usually the one with the best story in it.

MOUNT Any tape or glue stick works. Photo corners work too, if you have them — the printed guides show you where.

WRITE Answer the printed questions first. They will pull the rest of the story out on their own.

Thirty photos is enough for a lifetime, or just one summer. Either way, when it's full, it isn't a photo box anymore — it's a book someone will keep.

WHO'S IN THIS PHOTO?

GUESS THE YEAR.

WHERE WAS THIS TAKEN?

WHAT WAS HAPPENING JUST BEFORE OR AFTER THIS WAS TAKEN?

AND THE STORY —

What sound do you remember from this moment, even if it's not in the photo?

What did that day smell like — food, weather, someone's perfume?

If this photo had a title, like a painting in a museum, what would it be?

Now hand it over.

A finished book like this is not for a shelf. Give it to the person who will ask you about page four. Read it out loud at a holiday.

Let a grandchild flip through it and interrupt you.

The photos already survived this long. Now the stories will too.
